PEACE BARGAIN | President Zelenskyy rejects territorial concessions and warns that a new European security framework could help Putin redraw borders, weaken NATO

Ukraine: US has floated Donbas-for-NATO deal

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy (C), US peace envoys Jared Kushner and Steve Witkoff at a press meet in Dublin, Ireland.

Kyiv: Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said the US had asked whether Kyiv would withdraw from parts of Donbas it still controls in exchange for NATO membership, but rejected surrendering territory or recognising Russian occupation.

The proposal emerged alongside US discussions about a new European security framework, which Zelenskyy warned could allow Moscow to weaken NATO and redraw borders. "In my view, this can be dangerous," he told reporters on Friday in remarks released on Saturday. "This should not be the main agenda." "Putin's desire to change borders in Europe is a fact," he said, adding, revisiting European security guarantees could fuel further conflict.

Zelenskyy said Ukraine was discussing a package with partners covering NATO and EU guarantees, a strong military, financial support and reconstruction. If those commitments were confirmed, he would ask Ukrainians whether to accept the deal.

He ruled out neutrality, saying it would require constitutional changes. "If Putin expects Ukraine's neutrality to be enshrined, that's not going to happen." Any broader changes to Europe's security arrangements, he said, must be decided by European NATO members after the war ends.

Ukraine's priorities in Abu Dhabi talks included an energy ceasefire, reopening the Black Sea, prisoner exchanges and preparations for a leaders' meeting. Zelenskyy said Russia was unwilling to agree to an energy ceasefire, while a prisoner exchange could involve 1,200–1,300 people on each side.

He also accused SpaceX of restricting Starshield satellite service in Russian-occupied territory, hampering Ukraine's efforts to intercept Russian drones. He said a speed limit of 161kph had applied for five days and questioned whether the restrictions were technical. Washington backed direct European participation in future talks, he added. —Agencies

Democrats win Alaska governorship after 28 yrs

Jonathan Kreiss-Tomkins defeats three Republicans, including Trump-backed candidate, as Democrats secure governorships in 30 American states

Juneau: Democrat Jonathan Kreiss-Tomkins has won Alaska's governorship, ending a 28-year electoral drought for the party amid sweeping Democratic victories in the US midterm elections.

The 37-year-old former state lawmaker defeated three Republicans – Bernadette Wilson, Dave Bronson and Treg Taylor – including Trump-endorsed Wilson.

His victory gives Democrats control of governorships in 30 states, including Iowa, Georgia, Ohio and Texas, which flipped from Republican control.

Kreiss-Tomkins, popularly known as JKT, campaigned on affordability, full funding for public schools and corporate income tax for all oil and gas producers. He also sought a moratorium on new data centres pending regulations.

He criticised outgoing Republican Governor Mike Dunleavy's eight-year tenure, particularly the deterioration of Alaska's ferry system, a vital transport link for communities without road access.

Promising bipartisan governance, Kreiss-Tomkins said he wanted Republicans, Democrats and independents in his Cabinet. "If they're competent, if they're service-minded, if they're entrepreneurial, if they're problem-solvers, you're on the team," he said at a candidate forum.

Republican US Senator Lisa Murkowski endorsed him a week before the election, praising his willingness to work across party lines. Three former governors – Democrat Tony Knowles, independent Bill Walker and Republican Frank Murkowski – also backed him. Kreiss-Tomkins said voters wanted "a government that works across party lines to move Alaska forward".

Alaska last elected a Democratic governor in 1998, when Knowles won re-election. Kreiss-Tomkins will be sworn in on December 7, with independent Zac Johnson as lieutenant governor. —AP
