MOVE COULD HIT INDIAN PROFESSIONALS WITH STEEP PAY CUTS ON RELOCATION

Relocate or quit: IBM to H-1B visa holders

POULOMI CHATTERJEE
Bengaluru, November 26

POLICY CHANGES

- Under revised policy, IBM staff unable to relocate outside US by year-end must quit
- Those opting to leave would reportedly be offered severance equivalent to 3 months' salary

- Changes will to apply across employee levels, barring those above Band 10
- Move comes as tech firms reassess dependence on foreign workers in US

IBM HAS GIVEN employees in a large section of its US consulting business a year-end deadline to either relocate to another country and continue working for the company or leave their jobs, as it moves to wind down visa and green card sponsorship for several roles.

The decision could affect a large number of foreign professionals, including Indians working in the US, amid the Trump administration's tightening of skilled immigration rules.

Under the revised policy, employees who are unable to move outside the US by the end of December will have to exit the company. Those opting to leave would reportedly be offered severance equivalent to three months' salary. The company has not disclosed the number of employees affected or the proportion of Indian professionals among them.

The changes are understood to apply across employee levels, barring those above Band 10, which covers senior leaders and specialised technical professionals.

IBM Consulting, the company's largest business division, employs more than 150,000 people globally, accounting for over half of its total workforce of around 264,300. However, the company has not disclosed how many of these employees are based in the US.

Several employees have also raised concerns about the financial implications of relocating, as salaries would be recalibrated to reflect local market rates. An employee has claimed that the pay reduction could be as high as 80% for those moving back to India, depending on their role.

An IBM spokesperson said the company had traditionally relied on high-skilled visa programmes to address shortages in specialised talent, but its participation in these programmes had declined in recent years. Changing client requirements and the availability of skills in different markets had also influenced the decision to end sponsorship for several roles.

US federal data showed that H-1B approvals for IBM fell from 3,000 in FY24 to 2,045 in FY25 and further to 1,611 in FY26, reflecting the company's declining reliance on the visa programme.

The move comes as technology companies reassess their dependence on foreign workers in the US following tighter immigration scrutiny. Last month, the US Department of Labour suspended several IT services companies, including Cognizant, Infosys, Tata Consultancy Services, Wipro and Adobe, from the Permanent Labor Certification (PERM) programme.

Shein's slow start in India tests Ambani's retail might

BLOOMBERG
November 26

SHEIN GLOBAL'S RETURN to India through a local partner is off to a slow start, due to supply chain snags, leadership uncertainty and a lack of proprietary technology that made the fast-fashion brand a hit.

It relaunched in February 2025, hoping to ride the retail might of Mukesh Ambani's Reliance Industries, but the venture has struggled to regain its former glory, sources said.

User adoption remains weak: the app averaged about 6 million monthly active users in October, down from the previous month and broadly unchanged from January levels, according to estimates shared by market intelligence firm Sensor Tower. By comparison, market leader Myntra, an indirect unit of Walmart, averaged about 100 million monthly active users.

These metrics are a far cry from Shein's 2017 debut in the country, when it drew hordes of customers looking for trendy clothes and pocket-friendly prices. It was then among dozens of Chinese apps, including TikTok, that the Centre banned in 2020 over security concerns. Before the ban, India accounted for 67% of Shein's monthly active users in 2019, according to Sensor Tower.

The tepid restart is a challenge for Isha Ambani, the Ambani scion who oversees the conglomerate's consumer business. Reliance Retail's stable includes partnerships with a gamut of global brands like Marks & Spencer, Pret A Manger, Hamleys and Sephora, a broad range that risks causing the enterprise to sag under its own weight. For Shein, the underwhelming India partnership means it cannot lean on the world's most populous nation for growth as it battles weak demand in Europe and the US, its two biggest markets.

Reliance is in charge of all operations in India, including product selection, marketing and sales, the people said. As a result, Shein has not shared its proprietary technology that allows the Chinese giant to to spot, design and produce new styles in less than 10 days. Reliance has thus had to build critical processes — from vendor onboarding to production workflows — from scratch, the people said.

Reliance also lacks Shein's vast manufacturing network in China. It has tapped smaller Indian makers to produce the apparel instead, many of which are not accustomed to producing the Gen-Z focused styles the brand is known for.

Suppliers have had to adjust to unusually specific requirements, resulting in additional training, higher wastage, and longer turnaround times, people familiar said.

Employees have also had to compete internally for funds and management attention, given Reliance Retail's sprawling collection of businesses and rapidly expanding brand portfolio.

Early leadership churn added to the uncertainty. Former Meta Platforms executive Manish Chopra, who was helping Reliance set up the Shein venture, left the group in 2024 within a year of joining, according to his LinkedIn profile.

Shein and Reliance Retail did not respond to queries from Bloomberg News. Chopra declined to comment.

InCred targets $1 billion for maiden emerging mkt credit fund

RAGHAVENDRA KAMATH
Mumbai , November 26

INCRED GLOBALASSET Management on Thursday announced the launch of its maiden emerging market (EM) credit fund, targeting a corpus of $1 billion over the next five years.

Its InCred EM Multi-Strategy Credit Hedge Fund is a trading-oriented, diversified long-short strategy with an Asian bias.

It will primarily invest in performing debt issued by emerging market and Asia-Pacific borrowers.

The portfolio will focus on Asia, the Asia-Pacific region and West Asia, while retaining the flexibility to invest in other emerging market credit markets.

The fund will not be tied to any single theme or region, the fund manager said.

It will also invest in US dollar-denominated bonds issued by Indian entities. However, its gross exposure to India is expected to remain below 10% of assets under management most of the time, the manager said.

Bhupinder Singh, founder of InCred Group, said Asian credit had evolved into a deep, institutional asset class but remained underserved by dedicated, actively managed strategies.

In court, Tata trusts

AN EXECUTIVE PRIVY to the development said the suit is limited to seeking a stay on the casting vote in such cases. In the trusts' view, a resolution should go through only when both nominee directors agree. The trusts are not seeking a stay on the meeting itself.

The trusts are also asking the court to declare the September 17 board resolution reappointing Chandrasekaran invalid. They are seeking ₹65 crore in damages, ₹50 crore for SDTT and ₹15 crore for RDTT, plus interest at 18% a year from the date of filing. They argue that the value of their stake was put at risk because the majority shareholder's interests were not protected at that meeting.

At the heart of the dispute is how that vote was counted. Noel Tata opposed the reappointment and Venu Srinivasan backed it. Both are directors nominated under Article 104B of the Articles of Association. Harish Manwani, who chaired the meeting, treated the vote as tied and used his casting vote to carry the proposal.

The trusts say this breached Article 121, which they read as requiring an affirmative majority of the Article 104B directors present. A chairman's casting vote cannot stand in for that majority, they argue. They also point out that Tata Sons itself once went to the Supreme Court to protect the affirmative voting rights of these directors. Tata Sons maintains that the reappointment was validly approved.

The trusts also say Tata Sons ignored the succession process. On August 12, Chandrasekaran wrote in an open letter that he would not seek reappointment when his term ends in February 2027. He cited the lack of unanimity and the indecision over his reappointment.

The next day, the SDTT board took his decision on record, resolved to set up a selection committee and directed Tata Sons to take the necessary steps. According to the trusts, that process was never followed.

"The trusts believe that Chandrasekaran's reappointment was illegal," the executive said. According to the executive, the trusts sent Tata Sons several notices and letters objecting to the reappointment. The company went ahead anyway, so the trusts decided to let the court decide.

The trusts authorised the litigation through a circular resolution on November 25. It names Tata Sons and six of its directors. At SDTT, whose board comprises Noel Tata, Neville Tata, Bhaskar Bhat, Vijay Singh and Venu Srinivasan, the resolution passed 3:2, with Srinivasan and Singh dissenting. The pair were also in the minority at RDTT, whose board includes Noel, his son Neville, his daughter Maya Tata, Srinivasan, Singh and Tushad Dubash.

The defendants are Tata Sons, Chandrasekaran, executive director and CFO Saurabh Agrawal, independent directors Harish Manwani and Anita George, and directors Venu Srinivasan and Noel Tata. Neither trust is seeking relief against Noel Tata.

SDTT holds 27.98% of Tata Sons, and is pursuing the case through trustee Bhaskar Bhat. RDTT holds 2.19%, and has authorised its legal head, Rishi Sharma, to represent it.

Vijay Singh & Venu Srinivasan...

"MY OBJECTION IS not to the Trust pursuing a bona fide legal remedy to protect a legitimate shareholder right. It is to the breadth and foreseeable effect of the relief now authorised, and to the use of a public charitable trust and its resources in a manner that may impede compliance by Tata Sons with a binding regulatory requirement of the Reserve Bank of India (RBI)," Singh wrote.

He said the proposed injunction specifically covers the November 30 board meeting, which is expected to consider steps towards implementing the RBI-mandated listing.

Tata Sons was classified as an upper-layer non-banking financial company in September 2022 and was required to list by September 2025. The RBI rejected its application to surrender its certificate of registration in September 2026 and reiterated the listing requirement in a communication dated November 16.

Srinivasan and Singh have sought an inquiry under Section 41B of the Maharashtra Public Trusts Act and directions under Section 41A, including a temporary restraint on committing further trust funds towards the proposed blanket injunction until its merits and fiduciary implications are independently examined.
