Ratnakar Dholakia: A lawyer of courage, integrity and conviction

Kuldip Sharma

Dholakia died on October 15

ON OCTOBER 15 this year, Kutch lost one of its most distinguished legal minds and one of its finest human beings. With the passing of Ratnakarbhai Jadavraybhai Dholakia at the age of 86, the legal fraternity, the Nagar community, and all those who value integrity in public life have been diminished.

I first came to know Ratnakarbhai during my tenure as Superintendent of Police, Kutch, from 1983 to 1985. Those were challenging years. Smuggling networks operated extensively across the border district, and law-enforcement agencies found themselves locked in a constant struggle against criminal syndicates and anti-national elements. Investigations alone were not sufficient. Their success ultimately depended upon competent, fearless and incorruptible prosecution. Ratnakarbhai stood in the front ranks of those who ensured that the rule of law prevailed.

Born in Bhuj on March 17, 1941, he had an unusual professional journey. Before entering the legal profession in 1975, he served in a variety of capacities, including the Forest Department, the police, education, and the Sales Tax Department. Those experiences perhaps helped shape the breadth of understanding that later distinguished him as a lawyer.

Over the decades, he built a formidable reputation. He served as District Government Pleader and Public Prosecutor and later as Special Prosecutor for several departments of the Central Government, handling matters relating to Customs, Central Excise, FERA, narcotics and other sensitive issues. He also appeared in significant cases involving money laundering, organised crime, arms trafficking, explosives and national security. His expertise in customs and smuggling cases became particularly valuable in a border district such as Kutch, where such offences were not merely economic crimes but often carried strategic and security implications.

Yet, what made Ratnakarbhai exceptional was not merely legal competence. It was character.

EXPRESS special

He prepared every case with extraordinary diligence. He mastered facts as thoroughly as law. He believed that a government prosecutor had an obligation not only to represent a department but to serve the larger cause of justice. In a profession where many encounter temptations, pressures and threats, he remained steadfastly honest. His integrity was never in doubt.

That integrity came at a cost. In 1992, he was physically attacked near Mahadev Naka in Bhuj while on his way to court. Such incidents would have intimidated many – Not Ratnakarbhai. He continued his work with the same courage and commitment that had always defined him.

There is, however, one personal incident that I feel deserves to be recorded because it reveals a side of Ratnakarbhai that no professional résumé can adequately capture.

In April 2017, he organised the release of his book સંવેદના-શીલતા સરહદની (Sensitivity of the Border), a collection derived from his widely read Kutchmitra column on law, crime and the unique realities of borderland Kutch. He invited me to release the book. Members of the legal fraternity, including the District and Sessions Judge, were invited. Senior officers from Customs and Central Excise, departments with which he had been associated for decades as standing counsel, were also expected to participate.

The function was to be held at a respected educational institution in Bhuj, but it had to be postponed due to unforeseen circumstances.

Shortly thereafter, I was due to leave for a month-long visit to the United States. Before departing, I suggested that he should proceed with the book launch while I was away. The book was his achievement. There was no reason why its publication should be delayed because of me.

His response remains etched in my memory. He declined. Whenever he reorganised the event, he said, he would prefer that I be present. And he kept his word.

The function was eventually held in July 2017 at a hall belonging to the Nagar community, of which he was a proud and respected member. The venue had changed. The circumstances had changed. But Ratnakarbhai's sense of loyalty and conviction had not. I recount this episode not because it concerns me. The disagreements that existed between me and the ruling establishment of the day are neither relevant nor important here. What matters is what the incident revealed about Ratnakarbhai.

Over the years, I saw many people distance themselves from individuals who had fallen out of favour with those in power. Some did so to seek advantage. Others did so out of apprehension. These are realities of public life.

But not Ratnakar Dholakia.

This soft-spoken, mild-mannered and utterly unassuming man possessed a moral courage of the highest order. He was never strident. He was never theatrical. He did not seek confrontation. Yet, when a matter of principle arose, he stood his ground quietly and firmly. Neither pressure nor convenience dictated his conduct.

In an age when loyalty is often conditional and public positions are calibrated to prevailing winds, Ratnakarbhai displayed the rare courage of acting according to his conscience.

Outside the courtroom, he was deeply involved in the activities of the Gayatri Parivar and the Yug Nirman movement. He combined professional excellence with spiritual discipline and social commitment. His writings, later published in book form, reflected not merely professional experience but a deep understanding of the human and social dimensions of law and justice.

The Gujarat Bar and the legal profession have every reason to take pride in his life and work. Younger lawyers entering the profession would do well to study his example. He demonstrated that professional excellence need not be purchased at the cost of integrity and that courage need not be loud to be effective.

Ratnakarbhai Dholakia leaves behind far more than a record of successful prosecutions, professional appointments or public honours. He leaves behind the memory of a life lived with honesty, dignity, fearlessness and conviction.

Men like him are rare in any generation. Their passing leaves a void. Their example endures.

In Surat village, Dalit man 'flogged' for 'cutting foliage' on private property, dies

Kamal Saiyed
Surat, November 14

The six accused in police custody on Saturday. SURAT POLICE

A DALIT man was allegedly flogged to death after he and a friend of his were accused of "cutting foliage" on a private property without permission, in a Surat village.

Confirming the incident, which took place at Karadva on November 11, Assistant Commissioner of Police (J Division) AC Tarde said the police had arrested six men.

According to the police, Anil Rathod, 27, and Nilesh Rathod, 26, were at Krishna Seven Star Party Plot, located on the outskirts of Saniya Kande village in the Sachin area of Surat, where plot owner Vijay Maurya allegedly spotted the duo and accused them of theft.

Maurya and five others allegedly hurled casteist slurs at the two, kidnapped and took them to the Radhakrishna Party Plot in Karadva, where they were "tied to a pillar and flogged with wooden logs and electric cables". Both mentioned Plots are commercially used to host social and cultural events.

While Anil was left severely injured, Nilesh managed to escape. Seeing Anil's condition, the six accused also fled.

Nilesh then contacted Prakash Rathod (Anil's brother-in-law), who went to the spot and found Anil unconscious. Anil was taken to New Civil Hospital, where he was declared dead.

Prakash, 25, a farm worker, lodged a complaint at the Dindoli police station against Vijay Maurya alias Sonu and others at the Dindoli police station on Wednesday. The police registered an FIR charging the six with murder, illegal confinement, kidnapping, unlawful assembly and sections of the Atrocities Act.

Later, Vijay Maurya, Rahul Maurya, Abhishek Maurya, Sumit Singh, Sujit Yadav and Mahendra Maurya were arrested in connection with the incident. All six live in Saniya Kande but hail from Uttar Pradesh.

Blaze at Surat godown

A massive fire broke out at a cloth storage godown in Surat's Kharvasa on Saturday. Over 10 fire tenders were deployed at the site. ANI
